

Daily interaction with peers, educators, and other adults that are not part of their family Children is critical for young children social development. Making friends, working together in a group, and learning how to play together in a safe environment encourages sharing and respect for others. Activities are made in a way kids not only enjoy a pleasant afternoon but contribute to a stringer community appartenance that will follow them during their blooming.